

ABSTRACT

Various embodiments of the invention are directed towards fuel cell components (e.g., anodes, cathodes, or electrolytes) which are made by the application of a colloidal solution to a substrate, drying of the solution allowing particles to remain on the substrate, and sintering of the particles.